

JOSEPH P. SHEESLEY was born and raised in Pennsylvania and was first licensed in 1921 in the former Pittsburgh Conference. He first served churches in Morgan County, West Virginia, and through his years of pastoral experience demonstrated unusual ability in helping to merge congregations of differing denominations and conference backgrounds.

Because of early hardships, his opportunity for formal schooling was somewhat limited. However, with experience as a good teacher, he has filled almost every church office from Sunday School Superintendent to pastor and now Virginia Conference evangelist.

He attended Cleveland Bible Institute and completed the conference course of study as well as other training in the School of Theology in Reading, Pennsylvania.

During his lifetime he has preached in many small churches and rescue missions as well as some of our larger churches in West Virginia, Maryland, and Virginia. His main method in promoting revival is through his stress upon prayer, visitation, and personal counseling. Along with this he can combine biblical preaching and aid in the song leading and special music. He indicates a willingness to serve in any church, large or small.
